ALEJANDRO KUSCHNAROFF

Winemaker, Tikal

Alejandro was born into a family of vintners and credits his passion for winemaking to spending his childhood among the vineyards alongside his father. From an early age, he knew he wanted to follow in his father's footsteps and pursue a career in wine. He studied Enology while earning a degree in Agricultural Engineering in Mendoza and, after graduation, further expanded his experience by working at several wineries in the United States.

Alejandro views winemaking as a balance of science and art, combining technical expertise with a deep understanding of terroir to create wines that are both expressive and distinctive. A strong advocate for organic farming and biodynamic practices, he believes that healthy vineyards produce wines with greater elegance, character, and drinkability.

Together with Tikal owner Ernesto Catena, Alejandro embraces creativity and freedom as guiding principles in both life and winemaking. Much of his time is spent at Buho, Tikal's experimental winery, where he explores innovative techniques using small-lot fermentations and concrete egg fermenters.

Outside the winery, Alejandro enjoys playing weekly soccer matches with friends and spending time with his electric guitar, a creative outlet that both relaxes and inspires him.
