

Chilean Pinot Noir Catches Global Attention

'The World's Most Undervalued Wines: Chilean Pinot Noir'

"Chilean Pinot Noir is one of the most criminally undervalued wine categories on the planet....Drink them up, while Chilean Pinot is still a steal."

- Gabe Sasso, Snooth

'Pinot Goes Global'

"The theory that Pinot Noir is so delicate and finicky that it can succeed only in Burgundy is increasingly questionable.... In seeking value, the trick is to find up-and-coming sources that have yet to establish their reputation. Chile has been producing reliable, inexpensive Pinot Noir for years... Each new vintage brings better quality."

- Jancis Robinson, Financial Times

'Top Ten Wines From Chile'

"Chile is one of the hottest regions for great wines at reasonable prices. Pinot Noir seems to be the grape type really excelling, offering quality similar to Burgundy."

- James Suckling, jamesuckling.com
