LAURA CATENA

Founder & Managing Director, Luca & La Posta

Fourth generation vintner and The Drinks Business, Woman of the Year 2022, Laura Catena comes from a family of pioneering winemakers and is fueled by her love for vines and people. In addition to Luca & La Posta wines, Laura runs Catena Winery and the Catena Institute while living in San Francisco where she is a mother of three (Luca, Dante & Nicola), an ER doctor and an author.

Laura's pursuit to assist her father in making Argentine wines that would stand with the best in the world has grown immensely. She is not only insistent on helping her family, but her entire country as she dreams of Argentina's future in wine. She prides her family on being the first to recognize and highlight the magic of old vines and the potential of wines from the Uco Valley.

Laura joined her father in making Argentine wines that would stand with the best in the world. She is not only insistent on helping her family, but her entire country as she dreams of Argentina's future in wine. She prides family on being the first to recognize and highlight the magic of old vines and the potential of wines from the Uco Valley.

Laura describes her brands Luca and La Posta as both delicious and elegant with Luca Old Vine Malbec holding a spot in the Wine Spectator Top 100 wines list twice now. Her understanding that teamwork is of the utmost importance and her admiration for nature are both large drivers in her success.

In her downtime Laura enjoys walks with her dog Nala while listening to audiobooks. Laura and the vines are one, soaking up all the nutrients life has to offer day in and day out.
